"Toronto is the most multi-cultural city in the world." ~ Anita Dressler

Why, thank you for that information, Anita. But the next time you feel like preaching platitudes, why don't you take a walk first. Toronto would be a great place to do it. What you'll find is not what you could have just read off of somebody's travel brochure, but that the culture of this city is increasingy butt-ugly and morally depraved dystopic global capitalism. Even far-away writers for organs like and including The Guardian have observed that Toronto's claim for diversity - real diversity as opposed to the gift-shop imitation of if that your corporate masters pay lip-service to and invoke every time they turn it down - is a bogus conceit for Babbitt types.

No big, Anita. People will ignore your poster, in EVERY language - and that's what your bosses want more than anything.

Toronto is the most multi-cultural city in the world. It is a necessity to translate posters etc. in the dominant languages of the building, it has been suggested previously that English and the next two dominant languages considering that it would be impossible to put up posters in every building with every language we would lose our impact if the walls were covered with ten or twenty languages which is a possibility thus English and two dominant languages max.

GIFT SHOP MULTICULTURALISM: "How pretty their crafts are, so WHY do they have ato ask for RIGHTS?

Anti-MAD BIAS?
If it LOOKS like a duck....
QUACKS like a duck....
Chairman Dressler in
THE GLOBE

Last spring, Ms. Dressler met with several seniors living in 855 Roselawn, a TCHC building near Eglinton and Allen Road, and compiled a list of concerns. According to her report submitted to TCHC in May, 2017, "Tenants voiced a concern that numerous CAMH tenants have been moving into the building and creating issues for other tenants. Anti-social behaviour is occurring more frequently, such as doors banged on at two and three o'clock in the morning, excessive and yelling."

(Rather CLOSE to UPPER MANAGEMENT, ARENT WE, Anita? Intimate even!)

Dressler might argue that she's merely passing on the stereotypical concerns purportedly about MAD PEOPLE.

BUT from what I know of Dressler, from the way she calls for VOICES then edits out the critical one, she picks and chooses here too.

This in my experience of MAD PEOPLE, and as ONE MYSELF, is simpy SCAPEGOATING.

In my own building (May Robinson aka "MURDER" Robinson Apartments) there are many MAD PEOPLE, the majority of whom are QUIET.

We keep to ourselves and generally don't want trouble least of all with the COPS, whether TORONTO POLICE or HOUSING STASI – who are generally more apt to aid the thugs who are harassing us than abet ourselves.

Finally, in those rare instances when a MAD PERSON – as opposed to a THUG perhaps – "causes a disturbance" – where's SCAMAITCH to deal with it? Where were they to PREVENT IT?

Out FUNDRAISING in PURPLE Ts?! You BET!
